Dear Bill:

You will doubtless think it unmannerly of me not to have pursued further in recent weeks the subject discussed in our correspondence in June. However, your letter of June 9th indicated no urgency, and at the same time I was anxious to see how things were working out in Philadelphia.

As I wrote in my first letter, I am committed to certain undertakings at the Railroad which still require some time to complete. In addition, I am committed to some part time work at the University of Pennsylvania. It looked, in May, as if our entering class would be a small one, and that I could be relieved of teaching there if necessary. Now that there has been some relaxing of draft boards' demands, our entering class is considerably larger and closer to full strength; consequently, it would prove most embarrassing to the Law School if I were to pull out during the 1st half year. A sudden emergency or a change in Administration policy in Washington would of course alter the situation very quickly.

This letter is intended to be an expression of continuing interest and in the nature also of an inquiry. If you still think it would be worthwhile for me to come down and talk with your General Counsel, I should be glad to do so sometime in the course of the next few weeks.

With best regards,

Sincerely yours,

S
